

Descendants of Jacob von Allenbach

Generation No. 1

1. JACOB<sup>1</sup> VON ALLENBACH was born Abt. 1515 in Allenbach, Germany.

Notes for JACOB VON ALLENBACH:

Information on the early Allmachers starting with Jacob von Allenbach was provided by Wolf W. Seelentag, of St. Gallen, Switzerland. Wolf is married to a descendent of the Allmachers. Wolf started his research with a compilation by Oscar Penningroth, now kept at the Archives of "Evangelische Landeskirche in Rheinland" in Düsseldorf, Germany. The Allmacher history is (unlike for other families researched by Penningroth) far from complete. Wolf therefore extracted Allmacher data from the church records in Trarbach completely for the time prior to 1803. Penningroth is still the only source for information prior to church records (like tax records). Wolf later obtained information on lines immigrated to America from the records of the Church of the Latter Day Saints (Mormons), from family bibles and from living descendents of Jacob von Allenbach now Allmachers.

Information on the descendancy of Johann Heinrich Allmacher's family line were provided by Ulrich Conrath. His data has been compiled through research of church records up to 1798 and then from personal records stored at the Registry Offices (Standesamt) in Traben-Trarbach. Ulrich is also married to a descendant of the Allmachers.

Information on Heinrich and Margarethe Haid and their children came from the family bible kept by Margarethe Haid Allmacher and later by Laura Smith Allmacher. The bible is now in the hands of Paul and Laura Allmacher's grandson, Paul Sebastian Allmacher.

Jacob von Allenbach (which literally means Jacob from Allenbach and in Germany is pronounced Yacob) came to Trarbach in 1565 from Rissbach (approx. 2 km. from Trarbach) where he had lived since 1553. This was the period when surnames had just begun to develop and people were generally known by their given names only, and, to make a case for ambiguity, a "nickname" was often added based on their profession, on a father's name, or often for those born elsewhere, the name of the place where they came from. It is therefore safe to assume the "Jacob von Allenbach" came from the village of Allenbach, some 25 kilometers (km) south of Trarbach. For several decades family members were known as the "Lauers" or "Lawers" (from Lawer = tanner), the profession of the family. Starting only in the late 16th century did the name "Allmacher" (derived from Allenbacher - from Allenbach) begin to be used in church records.

These Allmachers were Protestants, stayed in Trarbach for a long period of time, and only in the second half of the 18th century had they begun to spread to surrounding communities, where some converted to the Catholic faith after marrying Catholic women, and finally moved abroad. For all Allmachers living in Germany today, and interested in Genealogy, their family tree can be traced back to Jacob von Allenbach. For some American lines, some emigrants can not yet be traced to their German origins however.

During about 1600 to 1800 there was also a separate Catholic Allmacher line in and around Bernkastel. So far no connection to the Protestant Trarbach line has been found and this Bernkastel line seems to have become extinct around 1800.

In 1904 the neighboring towns of Traben and Trarbach were united into Traben-Trarbach.

Finally, three additional comments need to be made:

1. Naming conventions: It was quite common in German speaking areas to have an identical "first" name for all boys and girls of a family. Consequently the "middle" name is the important one to distinguish between brothers and sisters (ie. if a boy is baptized as "Johann Reichard" he will be known as "Reichard" - in contradiction to English/American naming conventions).

2. Until late 17th century the Trarbach church registers only list baptismal dates, and do not state the date of birth specifically. Usually children were baptized on the day of birth, or only a few days afterwards, therefore, the "dates of birth" listed for Allmacher birth dates prior to 1700 have to be treated with some caution.

3. Double Dates: Perhaps some of you wonder why you see a birth or death date on a Genealogy Report with two different years (ie. 1751/52). Beginning in 45 B.C., many parts of the world used the Julian calendar to mark the passage of time. According to the Julian calendar, March 25 was the first day of the year and each year was 365 days and 6 hours long. In 1582, Pope Gregory XIII determined that the Julian calendar was incorrect: each day was just a little bit too long. This meant that the human calendar wasn't keeping up with nature's calendar, and the seasons kept arriving slightly earlier in the year. To solve the problem, Pope Gregory XIII created the Gregorian calendar. This is the calendar that we use officially in the United States. As you know, this new calendar changed the first day of the year from March 25 to January 1. Pope Gregory also had everyone jump ahead by 10 days to make up for the days that were lost when the world was using the old Julian calendar.

The practice of writing double dates resulted from this switch from the Julian to the Gregorian calendar, and also from the fact that not all countries and people accepted the new calendar at the same time. For example, England and the American colonies didn't officially accept the new calendar until 1752. Before 1752, the English government still observed March 25 as the first of the year, but most of the population observed January 1 as the first of the year. For this reason, many people wrote dates falling between January 1 and March 25 with both years, as in the following examples.

Julian or Old Style	Gregorian or New Style	Double Date
December 25, 1718	December 25, 1718	December 25, 1718
January 1, 1718	January 1, 1719	January 1, 1718/19
February 2, 1718	February 2, 1719	February 2, 1718/19
March 25, 1719	March 25, 1719	March 25, 1719

By the time England and the colonies adopted the new Gregorian calendar, the discrepancy between the two calendars was eleven days, instead of ten. To resolve the discrepancy, the government ordered that September 2, 1752 be followed by September 14, 1752. Some people also added 11 days to their birth dates (a fact which is not noted on their birth certificates).

Therefore, Double Dates work as follows. You can enter either Jan 1, 1493/4 or Jan 1, 1493/1494; both display as January 1, 1493/94. If you don't type in both of the years, Family Tree Maker interprets the year you typed as the second year. Whenever two years are quoted, the second year is the correct year.

5. HANS HENRICH<sup>5</sup> ALLMACHER (HANS JACOB<sup>4</sup>, JOHANNES<sup>3</sup>, NICLAS<sup>2</sup>, JACOB<sup>1</sup> VON ALLENBACH) was born 31 Jan 1633/34 in Trarbach an der Mosel, now Traben-Trarbach, Germany, and died 1685. He married MAGDELENA SCHUMP 06 Aug 1661 in Trarbach an der Mosel, now Traben-Trarbach, Germany, daughter of MATTHES SCHUMP and ANNA ELISABETH. She was born 17 Oct 1641 in Enkirch, Germany.

Notes for HANS HENRICH ALLMACHER:

Hans Heinrich Allmacher was a tanner.

In addition to the son, Hans Adolph, there were 6 other children from the marriage of Hans Heinrich and Magdalena Schlump.

More About HANS HENRICH ALLMACHER:

Burial: 16 Apr 1685, Trarbach an der Mosel, now Traben-Trarbach, Germany

Notes for MAGDELENA SCHUMP:

There is some confusion about Magdalena's parents, as in the baptismal entry of October 17, 1641, the father's name is given as Johannes. No Matthess Schump shows up in the Enkirch church registers of the time, but a Matthess Schump originally from Enkirch could have lived somewhere else and still be known as "from Enkirch".
